

Fly Tipping and Commercial Waste

Fly tipping costs the UK public around £40 million per year

Product overview

The constant battle against fly-tipping means the problem grows from being an unsightly inconvenience to attracting vermin, presenting a health risk and potentially causing fires. If not cleared quickly, bulk fly-tipped rubbish attracts waste from more fly-tippers like a magnet, so the problem needs to be dealt with quickly, efficiently and safely.

Licensed by the Environment Agency, Clearway has been clearing waste and rubbish from domestic and commercial sites and properties since 1991. From multiple bags of domestic waste to entire land sites filled with tons of bio-hazardous waste, we've seen and cleared it all.

Our fully licensed teams of fly-tipping removal specialists will safely clear fly-tipped waste from private or public land, ensuring the area is left in a clean and environmentally-friendly state, thereby helping to restore the area to its natural state and minimising the risk of the waste having a lasting impact on the local environment, wildlife and the general public.

Over the last 30 years, we have continually worked with landowners, local authorities and commercial organisations. The waste is taken to a registered waste transfer agent who processes the waste material and ensures it is disposed of in accordance with all waste disposal and environmental regulations.
